

Frame house on brick piers, three bays wide with interior chimneys in either gable end. Story and a half with a hip-roof porch on the first floor supported by small brackets (once). Two over two lights in the two first floor windows and in the two smaller second floor windows. A shed-roof dormer is in the center bay, in the roof with original shingles. Brick capped chimneys and overhanging roof in the gable ends. Two windows are in the second floor on one gable end, and also have two over two lights. Two windows in the shed-roof dormer have six lights each.

The rear of the house has a door left of center, and a two-over-two light window to the left of that. Above the door is a small six-over-six light window. The right side is occupied by a rear ell which appears to be nearly as long as the house is wide. Two doors and a window appear in the side of this ell, and the gable end contains two small two-over-two light windows on either side of a very tall chimney which has no chimney cap. The roof of this gable does not overhang.

This Late 19th Century probable tenant house has been razed.

House was covered with original clapboard siding.
